So, why not read this column tomorrow...

By Helen Kennedy

I want to start my phrase column. You see, I'm a procrastinator. I'm always putting things off until I have no choice.

Because things get done before the last minute.

According to the Oxford dictionary procrastination means to postpone, delay or to be dilatory (slow to move along).

I use the perfect example of this word, without knowing anything about it, that the word has been for me.

It's a warning of the future; the past does what I have known.

I usually end up doing my work, which includes cleaning out my desk and doing things before I have to. (After all I can't wait, as all the things.)

There I sometimes write while I'm waiting for the bus.

My work procrastination is due to the fact that I have to do it. I want to do it, but I have to do it before I have to do it.

My work procrastination is due to the fact that I have to do it. I want to do it, but I have to do it before I have to do it.

Groundskeeper has seen many changes over the years

By Heather Gibson

Peter Higgins is a man who has been in ground-keeping for 32 years — planting flowers, mowing lawns, and doing all the other things that go into keeping a campus green.

Higgins, the grounds head groundskeeper at Clatsop Community College, has been working the college's lawns since April 1957.

And he has seen a great many changes in equipment, techniques, and the college's groundskeeping program. "There were a lot of changes in the early days," he said. "There were a lot of changes in the early days."

When the college was built, Higgins said, the grounds were a lot of dirt. "There were a lot of changes in the early days," he said. "There were a lot of changes in the early days."

working of the 1950s campus included getting the 12 and 14 inch pipes through the central roads.

He recalls when the campus was first built, the lawns and flower beds were a lot of dirt. "There were a lot of changes in the early days," he said. "There were a lot of changes in the early days."

Higgins, a graduate of the High School of Portland, said Clatsop was a great place to work. "There were a lot of changes in the early days," he said. "There were a lot of changes in the early days."

Over the years, Higgins said he has been asked to do a lot of things. "There were a lot of changes in the early days," he said. "There were a lot of changes in the early days."

the history of the college's grounds. When James Davidson was the first groundskeeper, Higgins said, "There were a lot of changes in the early days."

One project which he thinks would enhance the grounds is a flower bed outside the Clatsop Community College Center where students and faculty could plant flowers.

"I have often thought about it," Higgins said. "I have often thought about it."

Mature students learn to deal with stress

By Kathleen Pasterberg

We are of course under stress, it is something we just can't get away from, said the manager. But the students at Clatsop Community College are learning to deal with stress. "There were a lot of changes in the early days," he said. "There were a lot of changes in the early days."

"It is not that stress is bad," he said. "It is not that stress is bad." Higgins said he has seen a lot of changes in the college's grounds. "There were a lot of changes in the early days," he said. "There were a lot of changes in the early days."
